David Wollin

Member Artist of The Art Guild

President of the Photography Club of Long Island

Member of the Manhasset Art Association and the Photographic Federation of Long

"Don't forget the shoes, you always have to show the shoes" my Uncle Ben, our family's resident photographer used to coach me. My fascination with photography began as a child, and thanks to the influence of some great photographers and my family members it has always been a part of me. Growing up on Long Island, my love of the water and sailing made these subjects my early favorites. Getting my first SLR increased my interest in capturing beautiful scenes and important life cycle moments. Moving into digital photography opened up new vistas in creativity and added more artistry to my images. Being a sailor has enabled me to visualize, experience, and capture many beautiful and dynamic maritime scenes. I am thrilled when dramatic lighting, vivid colors, lines, and shapes combine with my subjects to produce eye-catching and memorable images. Getting the terrific photo that tells a story, generates emotion or shows the beauty of our world and its surroundings is always exciting and challenging. When I see something interesting, I try to think "how would that look hanging on a wall in my home?"

David studied photography under the tutelage of Josef A. Schneider, the renowned portrait and child photographer. He learned underwater photography from David Doubilet, now Contributing Photographer-in-Residence at National Geographic. He is Board Member of The Art Guild of Port Washington (TAG), President of the Photography Club of Long Island (PCLI), and a member of the Photographic Federation of Long Island. Mr. Wollin has served as Juror for several photography contests including the "Making Waves" exhibit at the American Merchant Marine Museum at the United States Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point and the State University of New York Maritime College. David chairs photographic exhibits for The Art Guild of Port Washington and served on the Art Committee for the Designer Show-House at Hempstead House in Sands Point. His award-winning work has been exhibited in many locations around Long Island.
